"Wild Bill" Donovan Pitches Remarkable Ball for Seven Innings and Blows Up.

under the prolonged strain, and the Chicago world's champions captured their second game of the present series, 6 to 1.

Detroit's hopes, which were high after betroit's nopes, which were high after seven innings, in which Chicago had made only one hit, were dashed in the eighth. In that sensational portion of the game Donoyan was hit for a home run, a triple, a double and three singles. Incidentally he walked one man and allowed another to score on a wild pitch. Overall, on the contrary, was steady throughout the game holding the Thees to four hits and game, holding the Tigers to four hits and one run. That run marked Detroit's de-spairing effort in their half of the ninth.

Chicago. Oct. II.—After eight innings of clockwork baseball today, "Wild Bill" Donovan, premier pitcher of the champions of the American league, weakened Donovan's delivery that is up to the Donovan's delivery that is up to the Donovan's delivery, that is, up to the eighth. Then it was different.

"Orvie's" Work Masterly.

Overall's pitching was masterly. He was found for only four scattered hits, no two of which came in the same inning. and one of which has to be counted be-cause Messrs. Overall and Kling both went after Schaefer's bunt, and, each stopping for the other to field it, it went for a hit. He issued passes twice. Crawtune, but Steinfeldt flew out, retiring the side.

There was comparatively little loise. The spectators were too highly keyed by the neck-and-neck struggle to ndulge in much cheering. And, beside, lespite bright sunlight, the air was rather chilly, which also had a subduing effect. A number of rugs and blankets were used to have a specific to second on Crawford's out and scored when Cobb singled to center. Rossman, however, bit into a double play and

Guy the Merry Widows.

The main grandstand held a fair sprinkling of women, whose headgear, when it happened to be of the latest sweeping model, which was nearly always, created considerable merriment, not untinged with malice. The stand was crowded, and in one wing men and boys stood up and cheered wildly whenever a woman with the gigantic fall fashion in hats walked down the aisles. Outwardly the applause was good-natured, but it had its inception in the fact that one of those hats would block the view of half a dozens pectators, while any one sitting at the side of a woman thus bedecked had to lean far aside to keep out of range. However, with the beginning of play the mockery of cheers ceased and the fair saw the game serenely pectators

To Joe Tinker belongs the credit for breaking the spell which Donovan had held over the Chicagoans for so long. Steinfeldt had struck out and Hofman ad reached first because Schaefer, af- at

Not until the fifth did the world's champions connect with his wizard curves. Then the distinction fell to Overall, who, considering the high class of ball he pitched, did not need the added glory. But he did it—posted a short fly just beyond Downs—and the Chicago enthusiasts cried loudly for a run. It was their first legitimate chance for ridding themselves of their excitement. Donovan, however, only smiled, and a mothent later the side was retired on a flashing couble play.

Not a runner of either side reached first base until the third. Then Overall passed Downs and the latter was sacrificed to second, where his obsequies as a runner were performed. This was farther than the content of the standing to perform the content of the standing themselves of their excitement. The content of the standing the standing themselves of their excitement. Overall reached first, bego for only two bases, but Klem only smiled. Such have always gone for home The ground rules provided that hits into the overflow crowd should re-strict the runner to two bases, but this certainly had nothing to do with that tre-mendous wallop of Tinker's.

Kling Gets Two-Bagger.

The application of the rule was illustrated by the next man at bat, John g. Kling drove the first ball pitched the overflow crowd on the left field and stopped running when he had reached cause Messrs. Overall and Kling both went after Schaefer's bunt, and, each stopping for the other to field it, it went for a hit. He issued passes twice. Crawford and McIntyre, who hit above 300 all season, were unable to connect safely with his delivery. That he was effective in holding down Crawford with the kind of held by the strategy of the st ball he pitched was remarked by critics bunt. Rossman, in a moment of absent-the game. Crawford is known as one mindedness, brought about by the general of the surest hitters of a high ball in either catastrophe which had happened to De-eague, yet Overall curved them around troit's aspirations, allowed Evers to flash away from first and reach second standwithout getting into trouble. Each side ing up while the ball remained in the was credited with an error, but neither first baseman's hands. Schultz tripled on a wild pitch. Characteristic and reach second standing triple to left center, scoring Sheekas credited with an error, but neither them figured in the score.

I'p to the eighth the game was a pitcher's battle, with both sides for the most allow as if the experience of last year's ampionship series when the same pitcher's worked would be repeated, namely a game. There was comparatively little bise. The spectators were too highly with comfort in various sections of the stands.

The attendance, due largely to the chilly weather, was only 17,760 paid admissions, according to official figures made public after the game. The gross receipts were $26,927.

Late candle light—there is still such illumination in certain quarters of Chicago—saw the shivering, blue lipped lines before the various ticket windows. Some efore the various ticket windows. Some of them, who might be distinguished by the camp stools they carried, had been O'Leary, there all night. Some had their breakfast, Crawford. c. f. but many others, with coat collars upturned and shoulders hunched over against e sharp October chill, drew on the cold Schaefer, 3d b. larders in their pockets for sustenance. Thus they stood while darkness disappeared and daylight came, for hours until Donovan, p. wickets were thrown back and the *Jones ... ticket sellers appeared. Later many of those who had been in line all night or ince early in the morning were to be seen morning disposing of their purchases at a slight advance in price to late comers. Many of them, however, were compelled at the last moment to unload their dickets for less money than they paid. A number of professional scalpers, who it is said, had procured a large number of genderic dickets in the end sold advance. Double plays—Tinker and said, had procured a large number of general admission tickets, in the end sold out at a discount of from 50 to 75 per cent. When play began the grand stands were filled and there were few unoccupied seats in the bleachers. To restrain the overflow crowd, low board fences were erected in left field, in right center field, and along the foul lines beyond first and third bases. Some spectators preferred to stand behind this fence rather to sit in the more behind this fence rather to sit in the more distant bleachers. Two hundred policemen under the personal direction of Chief Shippy, experienced no difficulty in keeping the crowd behind the barriers.
